The Claims of Science and Religion

From debates about when life begins to how it should end, a perceived conflict between religion and science haunts our everyday lives. This class uses case studies from American history to reconsider that conflict, including the teaching of evolution, birth control and abortion, dietary laws, vaccinations, gender and sexuality, and climate-change responses. You will come away from this class with a new set of tools to approach these debates and assumptions.

Brook Wilensky-Lanford
brookwl@live.unc.edu

Tuesdays and Thursdays
9:30AM-10:45AM

General Education Requirements: PH