

RELI 226

Human Animals in Religion and Ethics

What separates humans from animals? How can the relationship between human and nonhuman animals inform the study of religion, and what can the field of animal studies contribute to the study of religion and ethics? In this course, we will investigate the relationships between humans and animals in religion and philosophy. The course will demonstrate that attending to these connections and distinctions can highlight varying ideological and religious viewpoints.

Andrea Cooper Mondays and Wednesdays
adcooper@email.unc.edu 1:25PM-2:15PM

General Education Requirements: PH, GL

