REL 441
Religion in Early America

This course examines religion in America from Indigenous-European contact to the Civil War. We will chart the development of religious life, thought, and practice in North America, concentrating on areas later incorporated into the United States, but maintaining broad interest in other Americas. With the use of both written and visual primary sources, we will analyze subjects as varied as encounter, awakenings, religious freedom, diversity, slavery and social reform.